It appears, therefore, that Jefferson had an other opinion of Jackson than that stated by Mr Tilsenator Bayard, of Delaware, in speaking at Washington on St. Jackson's Pny and its memo-ries, informed the country that it a main prin-ciple of Jackson's political life was this, namely, that this country was a commonwealth which i belonged to all, and did not belong to any one; son contemplated a strong protective tariff with permanent surplus revenue for distribution among the states. So it appears that Senator I mand did not rightly construe the life and pur-pose of the great saint of the parly. But Senator Saulebury, the colleague of Seria-Bayard, did betier. The inspiration which he drew from the invocation to S. Jackson was simply this, to-wit.
